From King George County.

A letter from Comoru, King George county to the Richmond Dispatch dated January 28th says:

"The hydrophobia excitement is again running high in this county. Fifteen rabid dogs had to be shot in a single day in one neighborhood. Before it was known that the disease had again made its appearance many farm animals were bitten. Hogs are now dying in large quantities and the cattle attacked by dogs ten days ago begin to exhibit unmistakable symptoms of hydrophobia and have to be confined. Several small children have been bitten by house-dogs. It is estimated that no less than 450 dogs and hogs have died of rabies in this county since this time last year.

"In the course of a few days one farmer here had forty-two lambs killed by dogs, and about the same time nearly one hundred old sheep and lambs were destroyed in the same way on several plantations in a radius of nine miles. It is said that at least 20,000 worth of sheep are destroyed by dogs in King George every year, and it has been looked out that the farmers are planning a concert of action to demand of the next General Assembly a judicious dog law. Already it seems certain that this question will be made a political issue in the canvass next fall, and that no one unfavorable to the passage of such a law will secure the nomination for the House of Delegates.

"It is feared that several of the light-house keepers on the lower Potomac have perished. This fear grows out of the fact that no signal lights have been seen from land for some days. All communication being cut off, it is not possible to ascertain whether or not the supply of food and fuel on these houses are exhausted or whether the occupants are dead or alive.

"It is estimated that 4,000 oystermen, fishermen and sailors, who were caught by the freeze, are wandering about through the Northern Neck entirely dependent for food and shelter upon the charity of the natives."

FOR OFFICE SEEKERS.—A letter from Washington to the Richmond Dispatch says: "For the information of Virginia democrats who hope to procure clerical positions under the next administration, it can be stated that everything in the classified service—embracing practically all the places worth having—is under the regulation of the civil service commission, and members of Congress are powerless to aid any applicants. To get these places it is necessary to write to the civil service commission at Washington for a blank application, as well as a copy of the rules and regulations. After the examination has been successfully passed the applicant's name is put on what is known as the eligible list, and he or she waits until there is a vacancy, and in the regular order the positions are filled. It is a slow process, but it is the law of the land, and the sentiment of the country demands its enactment. While it stands the Virginia applicants are wasting their time in requesting congressmen to obtain clerical positions for them in the departments. President Harrison is said to be about to further extend the civil service regulations so they will include postoffice clerks in all the free delivery offices. If so, it would apply to places like Charlottesville, Lynchburg and others in Virginia. Just before Mr. Cleveland retired from the Presidency four years ago he extended the regulations so as to include the railway postal clerks."
